Indigenous welcome for delegates by the Gadigal People of the Eora Nation.
Introduction

Thank you to all of the Members who attended the NSW Labor Annual State Conference on 9 and 10 July 2011.

The Conference provided a great opportunity for our Party to lay the groundwork for the great task ahead of rebuilding. Delegates from all over NSW voted in favour of recommendations which will seek to rebuild our Party for the future, including:

- The trial of a number of community preselections;
- Simplification of eligibility for preselections, including a provision that those who have been party members for more than 10 years be granted full voting rights;
- The introduction of the NSW Policy Forum which brings together the entire shadow cabinet, trade union leaders and rank-and-file representatives to develop Labor Policies and ideas;
- FECs will elect one Delegate each to Labor’s National Conference;
- The introduction of Public Selection Forums to allow Candidates for public office the opportunity to speak directly to the membership;
- Expansion of the successful Central Policy Branch model;
- Expansion of NSW Labor Training Programs as part of the Campaign Insight Training Academy; and
- Stronger resourcing of Country Labor.

Robust and meaningful policy debates were had over the two days including on important issues such as industrial relations reforms, refugees and marriage equality.

A summary of all of the debates at Conference can be found in this post conference report.

With community engagement front and centre in our Party once more, we look forward to working with you as we rebuild our Party.

Sam Dastyari
General Secretary

Michael Lee
President
Michael began by acknowledging the support of the Prime Minister, Julia Gillard and the ALP National Office for the support they gave the NSW Branch during the 2010 Federal election campaign.

Michael said that the entire NSW campaign team including Sam Dastyari, Chris Minns and John Graham did an amazing job in holding the electorates of Eden-Monaro, Lindsay, Greenway, Dobell and Robertson.

Michael shared the NSW Branch’s appreciation to former Party President, Bernie Riordan, for the contribution he made to this and his other successful federal and state election campaigns.

Michael acknowledged the work of Kristina Keneally for her service as Premier to the people of NSW and her tireless campaign effort for the Australian Labor Party over so many months, as well as the enormous contribution of her predecessors, Nathan Rees, Morris Iemma and the incomparable Bob Carr.

Michael said that during Labor’s time in government, mistakes were made, but no Liberal rewriting of history can hide the achievements, such as every major teaching hospital rebuilt, renovated or massively extended.

He said that while the Party achieved so much, it wasn’t enough and that we can only begin to rebuild by facing up to these mistakes and developing new ways to engage with the community.

“Our new state leader, John Robertson, has encouraged us to be bold and the Rules Reform Package you will consider later today does just that,” said Michael.

“Just as Australia has changed, so has our party,” he said.

Michael concluded by saying that the Labor Party has the opportunity to harness that capacity to change and renew ourselves as the first step in rebuilding, before once more seeking new ideas, new policies to serve the people of NSW.
The General Secretary argued that NSW Labor must now consider major reform following the NSW State Election defeat on 26 March. He said that as a Party we must understand that we lost the election because we disconnected from the community.

He said that the proposed reforms would address this problem by creating greater engagement opportunities for both rank-and-file members and allow participation from the wider community. The plan for the Forum will be to gather ideas, propose policies and create a new Party platform to take to the 2015 State Election.

The first of these reforms would be aimed at reconnecting with the community through policy development. This would be done through the NSW Policy Forum, which would include Shadow Ministers, Union Leaders, rank and file members and the wider community. The plan for these Forums would be to gather ideas, propose policies, create a new Party platform, and go to the 2015 elections with these new policies.

The second is a plan for growth in the Party. Having community preselections would encourage Labor supporters to have a proportional level of participation in selecting their community’s candidate, provided they are committed to supporting Labor and are prepared to assist the local Labor Campaign.

The third reform is to increase member participation. These include giving power back to members, through various rule changes and initiatives, such as being able to join the Party online, direct election of rank and file members to State Policy Forums, Regional Policy Branches, FECs directly electing their National Conference Delegates and giving members an automatic preselection vote after 10 continuous years of membership.
The Prime Minister of Australia, the Honourable Julia Gillard MP addressed the Conference on Saturday. Discussing the defeat in March, the Prime Minister addressed the achievements of the NSW Labor Government including “the best ever Olympics, great school literacy results, historic environmental achievements like saving the south east forests, the remarkable victory over James Hardie and so much more”.

The Prime Minister spoke of the opportunity that NSW Labor has to learn, to reform, to renew and to rebuild while in Opposition. The issue of reform within the Party was also discussed by the Prime Minister, who referred to the reforms proposed by current NSW General Secretary, Sam Dastyari as “significant reforms deserving of consideration”.

The Prime Minister also mentioned the many achievements of the past Labor governments and the history of being the Party to always reform and make the tough decisions. The history of making tough decisions leading to some of the greatest Labor initiatives such as the Snowy River Scheme, Medicare, Saving the Franklin River, Universal superannuation and Native Title.

The carbon price issue was also discussed by the Prime Minister. Speaking the day before she announced the full carbon package, the Prime Minister noted “Margaret Thatcher and John Howard...accepted the need to act” on the issue of climate change and challenged the Opposition’s stance by stating they “have the temerity to call our carbon price a toxic tax”.

The fighting spirit of the Labor Party was again emphasised by the Prime Minister as she challenged the Opposition, “We’re still here, we’re still ready to fight for our nation’s future”. As well as touching on the past achievements, the Prime Minister also reiterated the main aims of the party as “we will stick up for the people we have always stuck up for”, even restating Chifley’s historic words “fight for the right, and truth and justice will prevail” as she discussed the need for the Federal Labor Government’s policies in modern day Australia.
Address by NSW Leader of the Opposition – John Robertson

NSW Leader of the Opposition, John Robertson addressed the Conference on Saturday morning, with a frank and honest examination of where the party currently stands, and where we must go from here.

He spoke of Labor’s achievements over the last 16 years, including:

- a doubled health budget
- upgrading or rebuilding very hospital
- reduced class sizes
- quality education, in which NSW students outperform all other States in numeracy and literacy
- 3000 more police on the streets
- all 17 crime categories are stable or declining.

Despite this, in the last four years, the NSW Labor Government broke too many promises. This hurt the people of NSW, who could no longer put their trust in Labor.

He condemned the “Liberal way”, and how the Liberal government is already cutting jobs and preparing for privatisation, breaking promises and hurting workers. Worse still, Barry O’Farrell is shutting down debate to serve his own interests.

The Labor Party, on the other hand, must encourage debate in open forums with members and supporters, must stand up for the rights of NSW working families, and must regain the trust of the people of NSW.
The rules debate on Saturday morning saw the introduction of a series of reforms which seek to ensure our Party engages directly with the community and develop stronger supporters and members.

At the 2011 NSW State Election, many traditional Labor supporters did not vote Labor for the first time in their lives.

Many of our traditional supporters felt that we had become too focused on ourselves and had failed to provide the representation that Labor supporters need, expect and deserve from the governments we form.

The lessons from the recent election are clear – we must reach out to our traditional supporters who, in March, voted Liberal for the first time.

That’s why NSW Labor supported recommendations to open up and engage the community when it comes to selecting our candidates.

The conference voted in favour of introducing a trial of community preselections where candidates are selected with the support of a large cross-section of our members and supporters. Voters, who are prepared to identify themselves as Labor supporters, will be able to participate and vote for who they think should be the Labor candidate in their area.

Community preselections will also be used to grow Party membership by identifying Labor supporters, and encouraging them to become Labor members.

Later this year, NSW Labor will be launching our direct voter contact system, which enables members from all over NSW to recruit, organise and campaign locally. Members will be equipped with the skills and support they need to engage with their local communities and grow our Party at a grassroots level.

Ultimately, by becoming more inclusive and by engaging the community, our candidates and our policies will better represent the aspirations and hopes of Labor supporters across NSW.

These reforms will also strengthen opportunities for our rank and file members to make a difference.

In order to strengthen rank and file involvement, we need to make it easier for people to join the Party and provide them with more ways to participate to ensure they remain active.

During the rules debate delegates spoke in favour of allowing people to join the Party online.

Delegates also spoke in favour of expanding our Policy Caucuses and the Central Policy Branch, revitalising Regional Assemblies and establishing the NSW Policy Forum.

In particular, the NSW Policy Forum will promote the discussion of new ideas and lead to the implementation of good Labor policy. The NSW Policy Forum will include the entire Shadow Cabinet, trade union leaders and directly-elected rank and file representatives. This will ensure that our policy discussions are more open and inclusive.

There was strong support at the Conference to allow Electorate Councils to elect delegates to National Conference.

Key reforms are outlined over the next few pages.
Introducing a trial of community preselections

Opening up our Party will involve shifting our candidate selection process towards a community preselection model, based on a primary model.

Under these changes, the local community will have direct participation in deciding who the Labor candidate will be for their area.

Beginning with some local government elections in NSW next year and five winnable state seats at the 2015 state election, voters who are prepared to identify themselves as Labor supporters will be able to participate and vote for who they think should be the Labor candidate for their area.

Primaries are a logical progression of the principles the founders of our party espoused – that our representatives should be chosen by a large cross-section of our members and supporters.

To vote in a community selection ballot, any person who is not a financial Party member must first sign a declaration stating that they:

(i) Are a Labor supporter;
(ii) Will assist the Labor candidate selected in the ballot for which they are registering as a voter; and
(iii) Are not a member of another political party or one of its affiliated organisations (Country Labor does not constitute another political party).

The introduction of community preselections represents an historic opportunity to identify and recruit Labor supporters in our community. This will ensure that Labor supporters who vote in community preselections are encouraged to continue their involvement by joining the Party.

Community preselections should be just the beginning of a Labor supporter’s participation in the Party. They must be used to turn Labor supporters into Labor members.
Introducing Public Office Selection Forums

Currently under the Rules, there are no requirements for candidates to present themselves publicly to the membership – a key aspect of being a strong representative.

Public Office Selection Forums will be held where there is a ballot required for public office to enable Party members to meet and ask questions of prospective candidates.

This improves the access our Party members have to those who want to run for public office.

The Public Office Selection Forum will take place at the polling place on the same day that voting takes place, with the Candidates in the selection ballot to address the forum and take questions from rank and file Party members.

All Party members can attend the forum. During the forum, members will be split up into small groups for discussion with each individual candidate.

The NSW Policy Forum

A new body, the NSW Policy Forum, comprising the entire shadow cabinet, trade union leaders and rank-and-file representatives will be charged with open community engagement in developing Labor Policy and ideas.

New ideas are needed for a vibrant Labor Party and these ideas cannot simply come from within. Our policy development process needs to recognise the power of harnessing external ideas.

a) The NSW Policy Forum has the following objectives:

(i) Facilitate policy debate and development amongst the State Parliamentary Labor Party, Policy Caucuses, Party Units and Affiliates, including making recommendations to the Federal Parliamentary Labor Party;

(ii) Provide a framework for the partnership between the State Parliamentary Labor Party and the wider labour movement;

(iii) Provide guidance on the causes and aspirations of the modern Labor movement;

(iv) Include Party Units, Party members and Affiliates in the debate on the direction of the Party;

Assistant General Secretary, Chris Minns argues that the Party needs to reform if we are to grow.

Amanda Fazio MLC supporting the Dastyari / Graham amendment.
Rank-and-file members of the NSW Policy Forum will be elected through a state-wide ballot. Any financial member of the Party with 12 months financial continuity can nominate.

A new campaigning model

As a broad labour movement, we will always be able to activate more supporters than our conservative opponents. We must take advantage of this.

Later this year, NSW Labor will launch our direct voter contact system, which was trialled during the 2011 Election. This will enable members from all over our State to help on campaigns at the click of a button.

The philosophy is simple: we need to activate more members and connect with more voters more often. By reconnecting with our base through large scale direct voter contact, we can strengthen our membership and our electoral position.

NSW Labor will roll out a community organising model to empower and equip members and supporters to recruit, organise and campaign locally.

Under this community organising model, Party members will be provided with more resources, training and support, so that they can identify Labor supporters, recruit new members, hold local events, run local campaigns, communicate and engage with voters, and produce and distribute material.

The Administrative Committee will establish an Organising Committee by the end of 2011 to consider developments in community organising and campaigning, and make recommendations about community organising and campaigning initiatives to the Administrative Committee.

The Organising Committee will contain representatives from trade unions, rank and file Party members, the Parliamentary Party and the organisational wing of the Party, appointed according to the principles of proportional representation.
Expanding our training programs

The Campaign Insight Program is an innovative training initiative which aims to train political activists in campaign management, strategy and tactics.

Campaign Insight provides grassroots activists with the skills, experience, networks and confidence required to have an impact on Labor Party campaigns across the country.

That is why ten years after the Campaign Insight program first began, we will be expanding the program even further to train more members across the state with more tailored one day and weekend long seminars.

In order to expand NSW Labor’s campaigning capacity, we need to invest more in our people. NSW Labor will therefore set a target of training 500 activists over the next two years.

THE LAUNCH OF THE CAMPAIGN INSIGHT TRAINING ACADEMY

In 2011, NSW Labor will be launching the new Campaign Insight Training Academy to help train grassroots activists and our next generation of Labor leaders.

Our Campaign Training modules will focus on enhancing the skills of the following groups:

1. Rank and file party members and grassroots activists, with a focus on Country Labor Members
2. Future Candidates
3. Members of Parliament
4. Campaign Directors
5. Councillors
6. Electorate Officers and Political staff
7. Elected officials in Branches and Electorate Councils

CREATING A NETWORK OF LEADERS

This year, NSW Labor will launch the Campaign Insight Network to connect members who have completed our training programs and to help improve their skills as campaign techniques change and evolve.

Make it easier to join the Party by allowing online applications

We need to make it easier to join the Party. Members of the Australian public can submit tax returns online. Today, so many of our transactions can be made on the Internet. People will now be able to join NSW Labor online, as long as they pay by electronic funds transfer from their own account, or with their own credit card.

Encourage more people to join by reviewing the fee structure

The 2009 NSW Labor Conference resolved to abolish the joining fee in order to encourage more people to join the Party. As our membership continues to decline, it is important to consider the effect, if any, of the Party’s membership fee structure on people’s decisions regarding whether or not to join and renew.

NSW Labor will therefore review the current fee structure to determine whether membership fees are set at the appropriate rate, taking into account the need to grow our Party, while providing sufficient income to fund its activities.
Local determination of some National Conference delegates

The NSW Labor Annual State Conference resolved to allow Federal Electorate Councils to elect delegates directly to the National Conference (one per FEC). Allowing Federal Electorate Councils to elect some of the National Conference delegation would strengthen rank and file involvement in the Party's processes. The National Principles of Organisation require that State Conference comprise 50% trade union representation, and 50% Party constituency representatives. This principle of 50/50 representation must continue.

Revitalise the Regional Assembly process

In the past, Regional Assemblies have provided a means for Party members to expand Labor's presence in the community by organising across electoral boundaries. Revitalising the Regional Assembly process will help members to rebuild and grow our Party.

Expanding the Central Policy Branch

Most people who join our Party want to participate in policy development and discussion. We must improve our mechanisms for policy development within our Party.

Members need to be given more opportunity to have their say. In Opposition, the need for open discussion amongst Party members is more important than ever. Robust and meaningful policy conversations need to be had at all levels of the Party if we are to move forward with a vision for NSW and Australia.

If an area would like to set up their own Regional Policy Branch, they may now do so by making a request to the Administrative Committee. This will allow members to meet regularly in larger groups with guest speakers on specific policy areas.

A State Electorate Council or State Electorate Councils may request a charter for a Policy Branch in their area, providing the existence of the Branch does not detract from existing branches. Policy Branches will operate in the same way as regular Branches, with members eligible to vote in local selection ballots, but will not send delegates to the Electorate Councils.

Giving Central Policy Branch members more of a say

Members of Central Policy Branch will be able to propose, second, speak to, amend, adjourn, vote on and pass motions for the first time at Central Policy Branch, giving members a greater say on policy. This will encourage more debate within our Party on important policy matters.

Offer more ways to participate through a trial of Online Branches

The nature of political participation is changing. In order to grow our Party, NSW Labor needs to offer people more ways to participate. In particular, NSW Labor needs to expand its online presence to engage with members and supporters online.

Online Policy Branches are one proposal for how NSW Labor might engage with members and supporters online.

In order to focus Online Policy Branches on the task of engaging with members and supporters online, and avoid them becoming another means to undertake branch stacking, it is proposed that members of Online Policy...
Branches not be eligible to vote in local selection ballots. Accordingly, members of Online Policy Branches would need to be permitted to be members of a Branch in their local area at the same time so that their involvement in an Online Policy Branch does not deny them the opportunity to qualify for a vote in a local selection ballot.

Rewarding long term Party Members

Being a member of our Party involves making a commitment to our organisation and its values and principles. This commitment should be rewarded with a say in rank and file ballots.

At present, many long-term members are disenfranchised by the complicated voter eligibility criteria.

Getting a preselection vote will be made easier for long term members of the Party.

NSW Labor members with 10 years service or more will be granted full voting rights in selection ballots for their local candidates for public office, just as Life Members of our Party currently do.

Intervene only in exceptional circumstances

The culture of imposing candidates needs to come to an end. The process of intervention has at times done more harm than good.

That’s why NSW Labor is moving down a path towards selection methods where members and supporters have a greater say in who the Labor candidate should be.
Policy Debates

Indigenous People and Reconciliation

The Indigenous People and Reconciliation Policy Caucus Report was presented by Caucus Chair, Wareen Mundine and focussed on the need to further support Indigenous people in NSW and to close the gap.

Meryl Dillon, Leanne Atkinson and Robyn Hakelis spoke in further support of the report, speaking about their experiences in their local communities. Delegates spoke about the need to support better education services for indigenous people. This was supported by Veronica Husted.

Dr Andrew McDonald spoke passionately about his resolution, which welcomed the establishment of the National ‘Closing the Gap’ strategy, which commits all Australian governments to improve the lives of Indigenous Australians, and in particular provide a better future for Indigenous children.

Delegates also voted in favour of a motion welcoming the establishment of the National Congress of Australia’s First Peoples. The National Congress of Australia’s First Peoples was formally launched on 2 May 2010 following years of work to establish a new national Indigenous representative body.

Our Economic Future

The Our Economic Future Policy Caucus Report was debated on Saturday afternoon and was moved by Caucus Chair Kirk McKenzie. He spoke about Labor’s work to reduce unemployment.

Leanne Hughes, secretary of the Caucus spoke further in support of the report focussing on the need to be inclusive by encouraging better education and more jobs. Delegates voted to support a motion supporting the Federal Government’s policy to encourage competition in the finance industry as well a a motion to congratulate the former NSW Labor Government for their commitment to stimulus during the financial economic crisis.

Delegates voted in favour of a motion to encourage the Federal Government to consult with the Australasian Meat Employees Union regarding the future of the live animal export trade.

Delegates spoke passionately in favour of supporting a motion to reinforce support for the public ownership of State assets in the future. Delegates also supported a resolution to ensure the NSW Labor Policy Forum addresses the increasing levels of inequality in NSW.

Country Labor

The Country Labor policy report was debated on Sunday morning, with a lively and entertaining discussion on a range of issues facing rural and regional NSW, including the rollout of the National Broadband Network, rural health investment and coal seam gas exploration.

Delegate Narelle Rich gave an emotive speech on the need for more resources in rural and regional schools for children with learning difficulties, and the unique challenges faced for these children outside of metropolitan centres.

Delegates voted to support a motion calling on Labor to differentiate itself from the Greens and their inner-city focused policies, a key issue for many country delegates. Delegates also discussed a range of measures to reform Country Labor and the upcoming Country Conference in February.

Finally, Mike Kelly, Member for Eden-Monaro, called on delegates to ‘go to war’ with him in the campaign to inform the community about the Federal Labor Government’s carbon price scheme. This received an overwhelming response from the Conference floor.

Funding for community services to meet SACS Equal Pay Case outcomes

Sally McManus, National Secretary of the Australian Services Union moved an urgency motion welcoming the announcement by the Federal Government to fund its share of pay increases that may arise from the ASU’s historic Equal Pay Case currently before Fair Work Australia.

The resolution was passed unanimously by the Conference.

Support for the National Disability Insurance Scheme

John Della Bosca, Campaign Director for the National Disability Insurance Scheme, put forward an urgency motion supporting the introduction of the National Disability Insurance Scheme.

Many speakers rose in support of the motion which calls on the Federal Parliament to join the NSW and Victorian Governments and maintain b-partisan support for the introduction of an NDIS.

The resolution was passed unanimously by the Conference.

Stronger Democracy and Social Justice

The Stronger Democracy and Social Justice Policy Caucus Report was presented on Sunday afternoon by Caucus Secretary, Bernie Smith.

The debate saw a motion put forward to refer same sex marriage to the National Conference where it will be debated later this year.

Delegates also supported an amendment to support refugees and uphold and honour Labor’s commitment to justice and compassion.

Delegate Sam Almaliki, himself a refugee from Iraq, gave an impassioned speech to support people who come to this country seeking refuge in times of war.

Prosperity and Fairness at Work

Mark Lennon, Secretary of Unions NSW and Gerard Dwyer, Secretary of the SDA, moved the Prosperity and Fairness at Work report. Gerard Dwyer reflected on the work by Labor to protect workers in NSW, including the introduction of the Industrial Relations Act 1996 as one of the greatest workplace relations legislation in Australia and overseas and the increase of public holidays under Labor governments.

Delegates supported a motion condemning the NSW Liberal Party and Barry O’Farrell for the introduction of the worst industrial relations in NSW history.

Shadow Industrial Relations Minister, Sophie Cotsis outlined what the legislation means for NSW workers: slashed wages, stripped conditions, no penalty rates, no negotiation, no equal pay, no independent umpire, gagged parliamentary debate, no fairness or wage justice for police, teachers, fire fighters, health workers, child protection workers, corrective service workers and workers in rural and regional NSW.

Delegates also supported amendments to abolish the ABCC and return fairness at work for construction workers.

Delegates voted in favour of a motion put forward by Natalie Bradbury from the Health Services Union and Sue Lines from United Voice, for better pay for healthcare workers, particularly in the aged care sector.

Delegates also voted in favour of a motion calling on the Federal Government to review the National Rail Safety Regulator project to ensure rail safety laws in NSW aren’t watered down in the name of uniformity.

Support for the National Disability Insurance Scheme

Anthony D’Adam and Shane O’Brien from the PSA rose to move a motion to repeal the legislation immediately when Labor is next elected in NSW.

Delegates gave impassioned speeches about the disregard for workplace rights at Marrickville Council with Graeme Kelly the Secretary of the USU arguing for the need to ensure Labor candidates are elected at a Local Government level to protect workers’ rights.

Delegates also supported amendments to abolish the ABCC and return fairness at work for construction workers.
Unions NSW Address

Secretary of Unions NSW, Mark Lennon gave the Unions NSW address on Sunday morning.

Mark said that the Labor Party should be proud of the significant achievements of Labor during its 16 years in government.

He also noted the importance of the Industrial Relations Act – a testament to the genius of the late Jeff Shaw – unique in its simplicity, profound in its impact, the Workplace Surveillance Act, the introduction of new Public Holidays Act which included Easter Sunday as a public holiday and echoed the words of John Robertson about the importance of the introduction of portable long service leave for cleaners.

Mark also focused on the uncompromising stand the previous government took against the underhand attempts by James Hardie to avoid paying proper compensation to the victims of their asbestos products.

Mark criticised moves by the O’Farrell Government in ripping away public sector workers.

“Peter Costello learnt that lesson, John Howard learnt that lesson and rest assured Barry O’Farrell will learn that lesson as well,” he said.

He encouraged all Labor Members to support the campaign to restore the rights a work of public sector employees because it is a fight for all workers.

Mark said that we need political and industrial Labor to work together to ensure we again attain government in NSW.

He finished by saying that “The cause of working people is too important for us to fail”.

Mark Lennon addresses the Conference and urges delegates to fight the O’Farrell Government’s extreme workplace laws.
Watkins Chisholm Report

Former Deputy Premier John Watkins and State Secretary of the QLD Branch of the ALP, Anthony Chisholm presented their review of the NSW Labor State Election on the Sunday morning of Conference. In conducting this review, they have attempted to explain how the loss happened and how we can prevent it ever happening again.

The presentation of the report was followed by an open microphone session where over 50 Members rose to speak in further support of the reforms and their views on how we can rebuild for the future.

The recommendations in the Watkins/Chisholm Report were endorsed by the Conference and are as follows:

1. Considering the scale of the loss suffered at the 2011 election, NSW Labor should give serious consideration to the recommendations of the 2010 National Review Report, as it offers a roadmap for party reform in NSW.

2. That NSW Labor endorse the trial and eventual adoption of Primaries in State preselections.

3. That NSW Labor endorse early preselections prior to the 2015 State Elections.

4. That NSW Labor commence a program of identifying and recruiting appropriate community leaders into the Party so that they can stand as ALP endorsed candidates.

5. That NSW Labor moves to reform the N.40 rule and reduce centralised preselection intervention.

6. That NSW Labor develop detailed candidate vetting mechanisms including those that consider police checks and detailed financial and behaviour vetting.

7. That the State Parliamentary Labor Party leadership endorses regular ongoing formal and informal education for all caucus Members including ethics education.

8. That the State Parliamentary Labor Party leadership takes steps to develop more collegiate caucus relationships.

9. That NSW Labor take steps to develop a new cooperative model of consultation between the Union leadership, State Parliamentary Labor Party and Head Office through a new accord or the development of the State Policy Forum.

10. That NSW Labor establish a policy development model that involves Party members.

11. That NSW Labor endorse and support the efforts by the Leader of the Opposition to engage the NSW community in a wider policy development process.

12. That NSW Labor continue to implement and expand the ‘grassroots voter contact’ campaign model first utilised in key seats in the March 2011 election, with its focus on volunteer mobilisation, demographic micro-targeting, and systematic voter contact.

13. That NSW Labor make a greater investment in training, not just for candidates and campaign directors, but also for volunteers and party members.

14. That NSW Labor support and assist with the development of affiliated organisations such as Subcontinental Friends of Labor, Chinese Friends of Labor, and Rainbow Labor.

15. That consideration be given to NSW Labor forming a permanent campaign phonebank headquarters where volunteers can engage in this successful model of campaigning on a constant basis.

16. That the Leader of the Opposition’s team and the Party Office be co-located for the 2015 State Campaign.

17. That the final 72 hour campaign which applied at the 2011 State Election become the template for closing out a campaign in future elections.

18. That campaign and volunteer training used before the 2011 State Election continue to be offered on an ongoing basis, particularly for new Party members.

19. That the NSW Branch builds on its successful campaign model to hold onto the seat of Marrickville against the Greens and use this as a template to defend against the Greens at all levels of Government.
Michael Lee, NSW Party President and Kaila Murnain, Organiser (Communications and Training) presented the 2011 Campaign Insight Graduates with their certificates on the Saturday afternoon of Conference. Twenty four NSW Labor Members completed the 10 Week Intensive Campaign Insight Program.

The participants attended weekly seminars on Wednesday nights over the 10 week period and heard from various guest speakers including senior Party Strategists and State and Federal Party Secretaries (past and present) about campaign strategies and techniques. The group completed the course with a residential in Terrigal over two days to test the skills they learnt throughout the program.

Guest speakers including Deborah O’Neill and other Candidates from marginal seats addressed the group on the importance of their role in helping Labor Candidates get elected.

Life Members Presentation

Congratulations to these new Life Members.

Life Members were this year given their certificates by President of NSW Labor, Michael Lee.

Jim Macken, former Supreme Court Judge, gave the keynote address during the Ceremony on the Sunday of Conference. He received a standing ovation from Conference Delegates.

Jim said that while there are many disadvantages associated with being a Life Member, including that to begin with you are very old, the greatest advantage is the memory that comes with your age, and in the Labor movement a long memory is indispensable to political survival.

He said that Labor is the Party of the people – “a humanist party, the party of the poor, the marginalised, the refugees, the unemployed, the workers – all of the people who have no-one else to represent them – a party of the people – a true humanist party – and the only one in Australia.”

He said that the new reforms are tentative steps – but steps nonetheless – and we can look forward to the future now as the Party of the people with some confidence.

He thanked the Trade Union Delegates and reflected on the day he joined a union – the day of his first pay after leaving school – on 26 January 1947 – he has been union ever since.

“Don’t ever forget that the unity of Labor is the hope of the world,” he said. To view Jim Macken’s full speech, visit: www.YouTube.com/user/nswlabor
